After heart surgery, most patients frequently visit the hospital for checkups, which can be both inconvenient and stressful. AtriaShield is an innovative hybrid heart monitor that combines biodegradable materials and AI to enhance modern healthcare standards.

The device is a miniature, patch-like disk that attaches non-invasively to the heart through a simple surgical procedure. It is positioned on the epicardium above the right ventricle and secured with a biodegradable adhesive that strengthens its grip in response to moisture.

AtriaShield connects to an app accessible to both the patient and the doctor via a secure passcode, using an NFC-enabled Bluetooth chip. Three embedded sensors continuously monitor cardiovascular vitals over time.

Additionally, the device features an advanced drug delivery system that can automatically open and close, along with a defibrillator that operates based on electrocardiogram (EKG) readings.

Beyond basic nutrition, the functional food approach acknowledges mushrooms as excellent sources of nutraceutical ingredients owing to the wide range of bioactive compounds. Universiti Malaya research reveals a therapeutic role of NevGro® for spinocerebellar ataxia type 3 (SCA3), an inherited and progressive neurodegenerative disorder. NevGro® is a dietary supplement derived from Herichium erinaceus mushroom. It is categorised under Dietary Supplement for Human included in Class 5 and certified halal by the Department of Islamic Development Malaysia, along with a registered trademark (No.: 2018001586) and technology readiness level (TRL) 9. It is developed by Grusonn Wellness Sdn. Bhd. Established in 2016, Grusonn Wellness is dedicated to providing excellent quality of mushroom-based nutraceutical products. As a BioNexus-status company, much emphasis is placed on building innovation-based collaborations between Grusonn Wellness and Universiti Malaya, directed at fostering research, commercialisation and business development.

Centre of Lipid Engineering and Applied Research (CLEAR) is a research centre under Ibnu Sina Institute for Scientific & Industrial Research, Universiti Teknologi Malaysia, focusing on research, development, and commercialization. Its expertise includes optimizing the palm oil industry and applying chemical engineering principles in extraction processes, crystallization, and membrane technology. At the MTE2025, CLEAR is showcasing a project that transforms underutilized loma fish (Thynnichthys thynnoides) by-products into high-value collagen and omega-3 for cosmetics and skincare. Using sustainable techniques like enzymatic hydrolysis and cold-pressing, the project extracts collagen from skin and scales, gelatine and calcium from bones, and omega-3 from viscera and heads. Remaining waste is repurposed into bioactive peptides and fertilizers, promoting a circular economy. Led by Prof. Dr. Siti Hamidah, the initiative supports eco-friendly skincare while benefiting fishing communities. Aligned with UN SDGs, it advances sustainable resource use and marine conservation, setting a new standard for green beauty innovations.

The city of Kuching is divided into 2 areas: north and south. Each of these is administered by a Datuk Bandar—a Commissioner for Kuching North and a Mayor for Kuching South.

Kuching City South largely covers the area previously under the Kuching Municipal Council (KMC). As it is still a local government authority, its powers and functions as conferred by the KMC Ordinance are maintained with minor changes.

As it is not a local authority, Kuching City North is placed under the jurisdiction of a Commissioner who is assisted by a Board of Advisors. The Commissioner is a corporate body directly responsible to the State's Chief Minister. The powers and functions of the Commissioner are contained in the Kuching City North Ordinance, which is closely modelled on that of Kuching City South.

Environmental sustainability is crucial, as 40 billion plastic utensils are discarded annually, harming ecosystems. The growing use of plastic cutlery, driven by its lightweight nature and accessibility, poses significant environmental threats. To tackle this issue, we present Bananbestick, a product designed to reduce plastic waste and ecological footprints for a greener future. Bananbestick offers a sustainable alternative by repurposing banana peels into bioplastic cutlery. The production process involves preparing banana powder by scraping, cutting, and treating peels with sodium metabisulfite. The dried peels are ground, mixed with thickening agents, heated, and molded into cutlery. The bioplastic is sun-dried and ready for use. Our product has undergone biodegradability and strength tests, proving it decays within five days and supports up to 80 grams.

ComMap is a digital system designed to enhance community engagement in Urban Redevelopment Projects across Sarawak. It allows residents to submit their needs and preferences before engagement sessions, ensuring that government agencies receive accurate and structured feedback. The process begins with data collection, where residents input their concerns through ComMap. This data is then analyzed using GIS and AI, providing valuable insights for planners and decision-makers. LCDA (Land Custody and Development Authority), the patent holder, ensures its integration into redevelopment initiatives. After analysis, findings are shared with stakeholders to improve project transparency and inclusivity. ComMap has gained support from Sarawak Digital Economy Corporation (SDEC) for commercialization and is attracting interest from Social Impact Assessment (SIA) consultants for its ability to streamline engagement and enhance planning efficiency.

We prepared 2 creations: 1. The Bionic Garden and 2) AGV Robotic Arm. The Bionic Garden created by our Secondary students team depicting an artificial garden harnessed by augmented reality (AR), that vividly demonstrates the consequences of environmental neglect on society. It acts as a potential catalyst for increasing our country's involvement in environmental affairs.

The AGV robotic arm on the other hand is created for watering or fertilizing flowers. It is an energy-efficient and environmentally sustainable solution that integrates autonomous technology with precision irrigation. Designed for use in agricultural environments, it uses AI to optimize water usage, reduce waste, and promote plant health. This innovation is a key step toward achieving more sustainable, resource-efficient agricultural practices. We are a private school which is already in town for almost 3 decades. Located in Bandar Sri Damansara catering for wholesome education from Kindergarten, Primary and Secondary Schools.
